SPECIAL INCOME TAX LEVY LIKELY TO BE ENACTED

Believe Action Likely For One Year, At Least

TO RAISE $55,000,000

Announce Acceptance of The Couzens Amendment For Extra Levy

By William K. Hutchinson
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Apr. 7.—(INS)—A special one year levy, imposing a flat ten per cent increase on all income taxes, may be written into the administration's new tax bill by the Senate next week in order to raise an additional $55,000,000 to pay for the recovery program.

This was the prospect today as administration leaders announced acceptance of the Couzens amendment. It would authorize the computation of income taxes upon the schedules now written into the new bill but compel the taxpayer to add ten per cent to his payment literally as a "token" contribution to recovery funds.

The whole Senate progressive bloc endorsed the proposal. They insisted the present generation should bear a larger share of the tax burden, necessitated by relief and emergency expenditures.

The $55,000,000 income tax increase will be accompanied, in all likelihood, by a $95,000,000 increase in estate taxes. The new LaFollette scale also has met administration approval. It would exempt fortunes up to $10,000 but impose a new and higher scale of rates on estates in excess of that amount. The maximum rate would be sixty per cent on estates in excess of $10,000,000.

The Senate already has added $7,600,000 to the finance committee's income tax rates, by increasing the lower brackets of surtaxes. This increase brought the anticipated income tax revenue up to House figures because the committee previously knocked off $7,000,000 by increasing earned income allowances from $6,000 to $20,000.

The bill, as it stood when the Senate recessed for the week-end, carried taxes expected to produce $337,000,000 of revenue. This was an increase of $79,000,000 over the House bill.

On top of this, the Senate may add $150,000,000 more by adoption of the LaFollette estate schedule and the Couzens special tax. Their approval would bring the bill's anticipated total revenue to $469,000,000 or $228,000,000 more than the House bill is expected to produce.

Administration leaders hoped to enact the bill by Monday night.

President's Son, Franklin, Fights With Newspaper Man

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 7.—(INS)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., who once tossed a bull in Spain, was in the day's news again today—this time for having tossed a newspaper cameraman.

The President's son, standing six feet four inches tall, proved his versatility as a football player, a boxer and a wrestler in an impromptu bout last night at the Arena here. He stole the show from a wrestling match by sailing full steam into the newspaper photographer, Donald Corvelli.

The unscheduled clash between handsome F. D. R., Jr., and Corvelli must be blamed on the cameraman's devotion to duty.

He believed it would make a grand picture for his paper if he could "shoot" the President's son in the unusual pose he presented as he stood cheering for his favorite, Gus Sonnenberg, who happened to be wrestling with Ray Steele, in the ring.

But, Roosevelt, Jr., was of a different mind. He didn't want to be "shot." And so when the photographer displayed the temerity of aiming his camera at the President's son, pulling the trigger of his flash gun and making for the nearest exit, he had the husky F. D. R., Jr., right on his heels.

Leaving his feet in approved gridiron fashion, the President's son brought Corvelli down with a flying tackle. A tangle of fists, elbows and feet ensued.

All eyes at the ringside turned from the Sonnenberg-Steele exhibition to watch this more interesting impromptu battle between the distinguished youth and the photographer. Before policemen could rush in and separate the combatants, the clothes of both had been soiled, ruffled and somewhat torn, with the cameraman's raiments getting the worst of it.

The cameraman himself got the worst of it, all spectators agreed.

So did the camera.

The camera lay in ruins on the concrete ramp to the rear of the ringside seats where the exciting fracas was staged. It had been kicked to pieces by the furious feet of the President's son.

Roosevelt, Jr., had come to Philadelphia by airplane from Cambridge, Mass., where he is a student at Harvard University. He came to see the Sonnenberg-Steele show. He stayed to put on a show of his own.

LEGION AIR

(By ELMER)

Look for this column in the future and learn more of the veterans organizations—their purpose, benefits to be derived from membership, and legislation affecting veterans and their dependents.

What does the Legion do in Legislation? The Legion has maintained a National Legislative Committee in Washington since 1919, to represent the ex-service men before the Congress. This committee takes the resolutions which are adopted by the National Convention which call for new laws or changes in existing laws and prepares and secures the introduction in the Senate and in the House of the necessary bills to carry out these mandates. The committee then arranges for hearings on this legislation, and presents the testimony and the witnesses in support of its enactment. The principal objective of the Legion has always been, of course, laws beneficial to the disabled men, and these have been too numerous to mention in detail.

When Congress passed the Independent Offices Bill over the President's veto, it added the names of 29,000 service disabled veterans to the payrolls of the nation. Amendments to this bill and sponsored by the Legion pertain only to World War Veterans and these amendments imposed an added cost to the Government of less than $43,000,000.

OPPOSE PLAN TO TAKE WATER TO AID OTHERS

Would Require 600 Cubic Feet of Water Per Second

WOULD REQUIRE DAMS

(Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the canal routes and flood control projects now under consideration in Pennsylvania and Ohio.)

By James C. Kinkaid
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

FRANKLIN, Apr. 7.—(INS)—Should the reader of this article wish to involve himself in a debate as to the merits of the Beaver-Mahoning River canal system, all he need do is come to this borough and suggest that it is the better route.

Residents here make no secret of their opposition to the proposal to serve Ohio points with water taken from this and other sections of Pennsylvania.

It is estimated that approximately 600 cubic feet of water per second would be necessary during the navigation season of 240 days at the summit level of the Beaver-Mahoning route.

Federal engineers have stated that an adequate supply of water for the summit level cannot be secured on this route from headwaters of the Mahoning, Shenango and Grand Rivers, except at a cost considerably greater than the cost of diverting water from the French Creek basin.

It would be necessary to construct a series of diversion dams, reservoirs, and feeder canals to supply an adequate water supply from the Allegheny watershed to the proposed canal. Several plans are under consideration.

One plan calls for a diversion dam about six miles below Meadville on French Creek. An objectionable feature cited by engineers on this plan would be the necessity of establishing a pool within the city of Meadville.

Another scheme would be the construction of a diversion dam a few miles above Meadville at the so-called Bemus site. However, an objection to this site is that the dam would only control approximately 694 square miles of the French Creek watershed as opposed to 946 square miles at the lower level.

In order to supply the needed water, a storage capacity of nearly 13,000,000,000 cubic feet would be necessary. The Pymatuning reservoir, recently completed by the States of Ohio and Pennsylvania, has an impounding capacity of approximately 8,000,000,000 cubic feet.

The plan under discussion contemplates raising the Pymatuning dam to an approximate elevation of 1,020 feet, giving an additional storage capacity of about 11,000,000,000 cubic feet. This additional storage at Pymatuning, together with that in Conneaut Lake and Conneaut outlet, would be sufficient to supply the needs of the canal at summit level.

It is pointed out that this French Creek diversion would not only improve low water flow in this stream during dry seasons but would also tend to reduce destructive flood flows. It is also shown that the regulated flow in the Shenango River by the Pymatuning reservoir would not be endangered in any way.

Nevertheless, residents and civic leaders in this area maintain that the waters should be used in operating a canal by way of the French Creek-Conneaut Outlet-Conneaut Lake route—the only one of four now under consideration by the government engineers located entirely within the confines of the Commonwealth.

(The next article discusses the question of economics in relation to the French Creek-Allegheny River route.)

ARREST PAIR IN THEFT OF TOOLS FROM GARAGE

Two Men From Bethlehem Admit Robbery to State Police

LOOT IS RECOVERED

Claim They Needed Tools To Repair Their Own Machines

SPRINGTOWN, Apr. 7.—Two silk mill employees of a Bethlehem plant yesterday admitted to Private Joseph Davey, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police that they broke into a Springtown garage early Thursday morning and stole tools and accessories valued at $206.

Those arrested and charged with felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods are:

Joseph Timmer, 20, single, of Coopersburg, and John J. Lennard, 21, married, of 537 East Fairview street, Bethlehem.

The tools were stolen from the public garage of S. L. Godshall, Springtown. After the robbery had been reported to State Police, it was but a short time until both men had been taken into custody and had admitted committing the thefts.

At the Timmer home, Private Davey found one-half of the stolen loot. After Timmer had been questioned he admitted his guilt and implicated Lennard. The other half of the stolen tools was found in Lennard's home in Bethlehem.

Both men told Private Davey that they intended to repair their own automobiles but that they did not have tools to do the work.

All of the stolen goods was recovered and returned to the owner.

At a hearing Thursday night before Justice of the Peace Levi D. Stever, Springtown, Timmer and Lennard were released under $500 bail furnished by their parents. They will come up for trial at the May term of criminal court.

Other Bucks county robberies of the past week are being investigated by the State Police who expect to make arrests in a few days. A bungalow at Lumberville and another at Buckingham were robbed.

TO DEPICT SCHOOLS OF THIRTY YEARS AGO

Interesting Program Arranged For Mothers' and Fathers' Associations

TO REPEAT NEXT NIGHT

Parents' night is to be held Wednesday evening in the high school "gym" when a special program is to be given by the high school pupils for the members of the Fathers' and Mothers' associations. Members of these two associations are asked to attend Wednesday evening instead of Thursday evening, when the program is to be repeated for those who are not members of either association.

The entertainment is designed to give a demonstration of the various extra-curricular activities, which are operating in the Bristol high school. It is introduced in a clever and unusual manner.

A school girl of 30 years ago, comes upon the stage rubbing her eyes and yawning and looks in amazement at the audience and the building. A modern boy approaches neatly dressed and carrying a book under his arm. He stops at sight of the girl, when an interesting dialogue follows during which the girl finds she has been asleep for 30 years.

The girl becomes reminiscent and tells the boy about her school days. She recounts the monotonous routine of school work, and shows how the entire aim of the schools of her day was to develop the intellect, regardless of the social or physical needs of the individual.

The boy, in turn, endeavors to explain the improvements seen in the modern schools. He tells her that five times as many students attend the high school as in her day, and that education today has a broader aim than just to develop the intellect; that through its extra-curricular activities, it furnishes opportunities for learning and practicing the qualities of good citizenship.

Finding the girl interested, the boy invites her to accompany him on a tour through the high school building, that she might see all the various organizations at work. The invitation is gladly accepted and visits are paid to the following:

Student Council, Traffic Club, Girl Reserves, Spelling Club, Commercial Club, Senior Glee Club, Rambler Staff, Library Club, Orchestra, Art Club, Science Club, Dramatic Club, Home Economics Club, Department in Mathematics, Boys' Gymnasium Team, Junior High Glee Club.

During the journey of the boy and girl all these extra-curricular activities, in full operation, will be portrayed on the stage. The entertainment is given on Wednesday evening, especially to the members of the Mothers' and Fathers' Associations.

The leads again last evening did excellently, and the dancing and singing choruses, both girl and stag, took their parts in finished style.

The proceeds of the production are for the Crumrine Scholarship Fund of the Junior Women's Clubs of Bucks County. Young women and young men from the several communities where junior women's clubs are located, took part.

FORTY KILLED IN TIDAL WAVE

Oslo, Norway, Apr. 7.—An enormous crag broke loose from a mountain side and crashed into the sea today near Tofjord, causing one of the most tragic and unusual disasters in the history of Norway. Forty were killed in the huge tidal wave which swept over the communities of Tofjord and Fordjaas as the gigantic rock-sled fell into the sea. The dead included 12 women, 11 men and 17 children. All the men were heads of families and the sole providers for their wives and children. At Fordjaas, a small community with only 30 inhabitants, only 13 survived. The tremendous force of the tidal wave is indicated by the fact that a large motor boat was thrown more than a thousand feet up on shore and left stranded there as the water receded. Three waves followed in succession as the sea churned upon the tremendous rock slide. The waves surged inland more than 3,000 feet, sweeping homes, fishing boats and all surface property of the humble fishermen before it. Many of those who lost their lives were drowned in their sleep.

GANDHI DROPS DISOBEDIENCE

Patna, India, Apr. 7.—A step of far-reaching significance in India's tangled political situation was taken today by Mahatma Gandhi when he advised his followers to drop civil disobedience as an instrument of policy. Gandhi's surprise action came through a statement to the India National Congress of which he is the leader. He asked the Congress to suspend the policy of civil disobedience as a method of concerted action and leave such action in the future solely to him. The Mahatma has not announced a substitute policy or indicated that he contemplates doing so, but his action puzzled political leaders and caused much speculation as to the future course of the nationalist movement.

OUTLOOK DISCOURAGING

The latest national pronouncement on disarmament, made by France, indicates that virtually no progress toward the settlement of this question has been made since the disarmament conference recessed. The outlook is that when the conference reassembles April 10 it will be just about where it was when it first met.

France apparently is as determined as ever to refuse to make any concessions except in return for guarantees of security which the others are unprepared to give. Germany seems more determined to re-arm. The efforts put forth by Great Britain and Italy to break the Franco-German deadlock show no progress.

Although friendly in tone, the note makes it clear that France holds firmly to its previously stated position. France is represented as being willing to disarm gradually, provided she receives due guarantees of security. Rearmament of Germany will not be consented to until a given period of strict automatic international control has ended.

This is the situation, it seems, that will prevail when the conference reassembles. In view of this, doubt arises as to the wisdom of re-assembling the meeting. A long, fruitless discussion such as has marked previous sessions could serve only to emphasize the impossibility of an agreement being reached. The cause of peace would not be helped. It might even be injured by the maneuverings of individual nations to escape the blame for a breakdown.

UNEMPLOYED BEES

Through some curious coincidence the bees are passing through lean years even as man is muddling and suffering through a period of depression. In a period when even bread is endangered for some and life needs sweetening for all the loss of honey is like denying the condemned a sip of water.

Several explanations are advanced for the unfilled hives and combs. A British scientist holds that from year to year the days are getting shorter leaving fewer "shining hours" for the bees to "improve."

Another points out that bees are communists, that while they were once endowed with reason they lost it by so ordering life as to dispense with it.

And then this seeming loss of bee-thrift and providence may be due to a bumbling dislike for mass production. It is argued that bees prefer personal contact with the keeper and that a keeper again will the busy bee be busy and a willing worker unless the individualized family hive returns to stinging to life the old apple orchard.

But you still find contented people in regions where a good 'possum dog brings more than a cow.

It's the winners and not the losers whose names are seen in connection with lotteries.

If all these back-to-the-and movements succeed, most of our cities soon may be depopulated.

Now that the Filipinos have prospective independence, they are beginning to wonder what to do

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Aboard the S.S. "Navarre," bound for America, Michael Lanyard, reformed "Lone Wolf" of crookdom, is reunited with his son whom he thought dead. Lanyard is disappointed to learn that the boy, traveling under the name "Maurice Parry," is a thief; but he hopes his son's interest in Fenna Crozier, lovely daughter of the wealthy Mrs. Fay Crozier, will prove a good influence. Maurice steals the famous Habsburg emeralds from Mrs. Crozier, substituting counterfeit. Lanyard retrieves the gems for Fay. In a bridge game, Lanyard exposes two gangsters "Jack Knife" Anderson and "English Archie," for cheating his son. Detective Crane warns Lanyard against their revenge. Soon the emeralds are stolen again and Lanyard is suspected when he refuses to name the first thief. M. Plon, French detective, and Captain Pascal are confident of Lanyard's guilt when they find the jewels in the latter's trunk, only to learn that they are the counterfeits. Fay gallantly says that she gave the zircons (false gems) to Lanyard as souvenirs. Lanyard is puzzled, for he had returned these to Maurice. Just as the captain orders Lanyard confined in his cabin until he reveals the culprit's name, the purser appears with the genuine emeralds, which were carelessly wrapped and left on his desk with instructions that they be deposited in the safe for Mme. Crozier. To prove her faith in Lanyard, Fay asks him to rewrap and return them to the purser. Embarrassed, the captain apologizes and withdraws with Plon. Despite the evidence, Lanyard cannot conceive of Maurice planting the zircons in his trunk. During lunch with his son, Lanyard tosses the zircons overboard. He is astounded when Maurice expresses his disappointment at finding the emeralds in Lanyard's trunk after the latter's supposed reform. To save his father, Maurice had replaced the jewels with the zircons.

CHAPTER XVI

"One moment," Lanyard cut in. "I demand that you listen! The emeralds were never in my knowledge in my trunk. Mme. Crozier promised last night to take them at once to the purser, but kept them in her stateroom instead. I was sent for by the Captain this morning to be accused, in her presence, of having stolen into her stateroom, chloroformed and robbed her, between half after eleven and noon. It resulted that my luggage was searched and the zircons found. I was cleared only when the purser showed up with a parcel."

"It was I who left it with him," Maurice announced. "I was determined that you should keep your record clear. I took my chance, tossed the box through the window when the purser wasn't looking, and went to find and tell you the emeralds were where you had said they were—in safe hands."

"My dear boy! You did that for my sake?"

"Oh, don't think I was unselfish! The rogue had a grin there was no resisting. 'I was simply taking measures to make sure that nothing else happened to one of my most cherished ideals.'"

"I shall free no more about you," Lanyard had held of his knife and fork again. "I know you will without fail come to your senses some day. Permit me to recommend this excellent file to your attention before it gets cold."

When the file was finished, however, they attacked the mystery again.

"What I can't make out, sir, is how the emeralds got into your trunk."

Lone Wolf will cling to my heels, as tenacious as my very own, till you bury me. My enemies knew I would, on that account, be suspected, my luggage be searched, and I—at the least—disgraced."

"Your enemies? You know of some aboard, sir?"

"I can think of at least two who have no reason to love me—whose fun I interfered with last night when they were happily plucking your pin-feathers. I am reliably informed that they are crooks of the first class in the American underworld."

"Not really? How very interesting!" The young man took the news in a disturbingly cheerful spirit. "That will make it all the more enjoyable to teach them a sound lesson."

"You will do nothing of the sort. Be good enough to look to yourself, if you please—you will have all you can do to keep out of jail, the way you are going—and leave me to manage my own feuds."

"Well," Maurice humored him, "we'll see." Over the last of the Carbonnux he pondered this complication. "All the same," he concluded, "I'm afraid you'll have to count those two out. It has just come to me that I probably shall know the chap who took liberties with your luggage, next time I lay eyes on him."

"You mean," Lanyard asked in civil curiosity, "the other chap?"

"Touche!" Maurice laughed without the least embarrassment. "I haven't told you everything, have I?"

"You have, to the contrary, marveled most affecting faith in my forbearance."

"Why! Fenna Crozier and I had looked all over for you, except of course in the writing-room, before it occurred to me that you might be still in your cabin. . . . By the way: what's your room-steward like?"

"Very like a Breton, a burly rascal but brisk."

"With a Breton accent, naturally? Then I know who the thief was—and he wasn't either of our card-sharps."

"Not my steward!"

"Probably not anybody's steward, but made up well to get by in the part. I could hear somebody moving about in your room, though he didn't answer my knock; so I knocked again. This time he opened the door—a smallish beast with mean eyes in a mean white face—saluted me, muttered, 'Pardon, m'sieur, one has just finished here—in the veritable accent of the Parisian Apache, now I come to think of it—and ducked down the passageway like a startled rabbit. I paid him no particular attention, but went in—thinking you wouldn't mind if I had a look round to see how well my father did himself—and was just about to go out again when I happened to notice your steamer trunk wasn't locked. The temptation to look in was too strong, and the Habsburg emeralds were hardly hidden under your dress shirts, with one corner of the shagreen case in plain sight."

Lanyard effected at an early hour an inconspicuous withdrawal from the life of the ship, preferring the solitude of his stateroom to observing from the sidelines the gayeties of the younger generation, which would have amused him only because his boy figured in them.

Through no fault of his own, then, the book which he took to bed with him went unread but by matches, and lay most of the time open on his knees but ignored.

The man was, in short and in all effect, bewitched; he could think of nothing but Maurice as he was and Maurice as he might be; how clever the youngster was, and how adaptable, how easily he had fitted himself into a circle to which nothing could have won his introduction except Fenna Crozier's mischief-bred interest and her mother's friendly disposition toward his father—how far he might go, and unquestionably would with such a start, if only it his conceit in himself as at once the logical and the direct lineal successor of the Lone Wolf!

But that, of course, was merely a question of time and method. The boy had already shown himself a creature of quick and generous sentiments. He could be led, then, if he could not be driven. Time and deft handling would turn the trick, and—yes, not at all impossibly, Fenna.

Only cure the cub of his folly, and nothing was impossible. Only rip the mantle of the Lone Wolf from his over-weening shoulders and feed it to the moth!

Graphic impressions of the day whose tale was closing formed, blended, faded, on the clouding screen of consciousness: Fay Crozier's fine old head with its white crown enhancing her clear girlish coloring; Crane's aquiline mask as brown as leather behind the blue reek of his everlasting pipe; Plon's sly spiteful eyes viewing all mankind obliquely; a glimpse of Jack-knife Anderson's in an unguarded moment blazing with hate; the head of Maurice lifting out of a ruck of the dancers with the bright head of Fenna drooping to his shoulder. . . . With his berth light still burning, Lanyard slept.

The click of the switch as the light went off, after a lapse which he had no means of measuring, started the man wide-awake and shot to his marrow with a sense of peril. But the hand that lifted instinctively to the light was struck down by another, and in the same pulse-beat a ring of metal nuzzled the ribs under his pajamas.

"Easy, fella," an ugly voice he didn't know advised out of the darkness. "Take it easy or you'll maybe jolt my trigger-finger."

"What do you want?" Lanyard responded, stirring not so much as a finger, but in a voice as discreetly pitched as the other's. "I'm afraid you've come to the wrong shop, my man—"

"What d'ya mean, 'the wrong shop?'" the man growled.

"The wrong stateroom. I have nothing of much value—not enough by half to pay you for the risk that you are running—"

"Listen, mug: if I was doin' any prowling, I wouldn't be on this side of the boat; I'd be on the other stickin' up Tess Boyce." The voice named one of the notoriety of the passenger-list, a lady internationally famous for the ropes of pearls which had accumulated upon a decidedly commonplace person as souvenirs of her miscellaneous adventures in marriage. "Maybe you didn't lamp the dame tonight, wearin' so much stuff she was bowlegged with the weight of it? Nah, nah, I just dropped in to be sociable and have a nice long talk."

"I still think you've called at the wrong address. I'm quite certain I don't know you."

"You ain't goin' to, neither, next time you meet me up on deck or anywhere."

"Don't be too sure. My nose is very sensitive. Would you mind sitting back a bit? I'm unarmed."

"Funny fella, ain't you? 'Sall right, only don't be as comical as you can, or maybe you'll find out my first finger's as sensitive as you say your nose is."

"Very well," Lanyard sighed. "It is true that when it comes to repartee you have me at a disadvantage. And now would you mind coming to the point?"

"I should think a bright guy like you would've tumbled already. You don't mean you're so dumb you don't know you're a pest?"

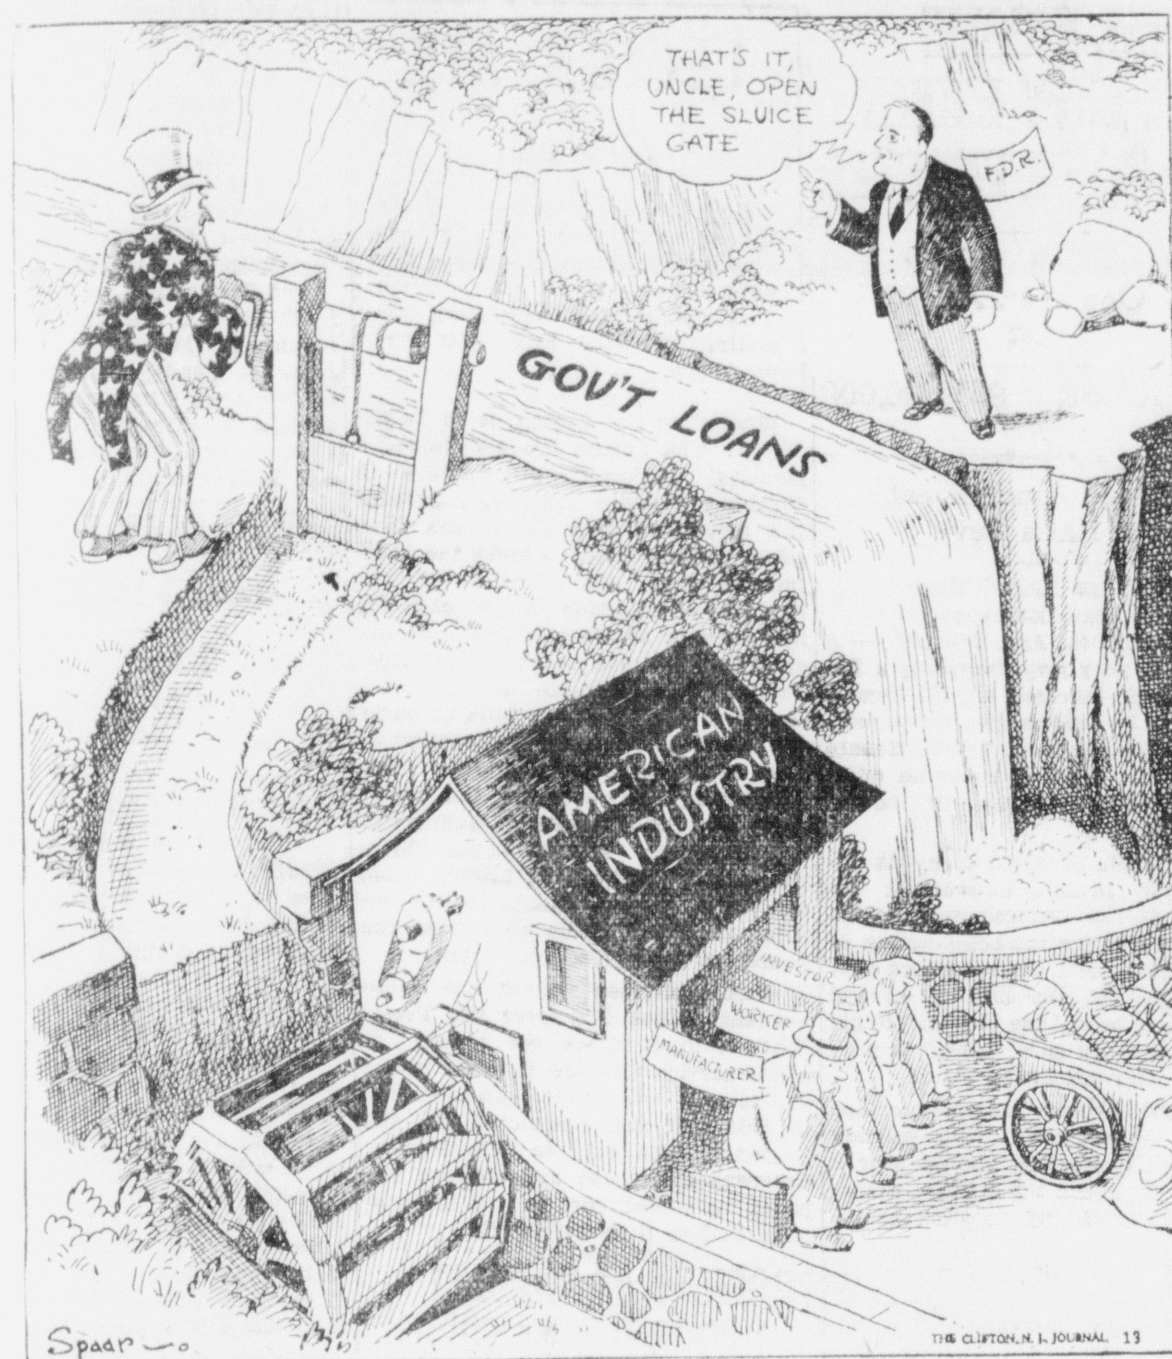

"In what respect, precisely?"

"Buttin' into friendly games of cards, for instance, and breakin' 'em up with your heah!"

"It was stupid of me not to have guessed. Well, what next? You have failed once today to square that account by making me out a jewel-thief. What new move is this? Do I get—as I believe you say—bumped off by a bullet?"

"I'll say, anyway, you've got your nerve with you."

ALL SET FOR RECOVERY WITH FEDERAL LOANS TO INDUSTRY

IN recommending loans for industry, President Roosevelt said that $700,000,000 additional working capital would keep 346,000 persons in their present jobs and create employment for 378,000 others.

Thus the administration gives formal recognition and support to a policy of federal assistance for industry that we have been urging for months. And it recognizes what we have said all during this time; namely, that such assistance will protect and increase employment.

This comes at an opportune time for millions of Americans who have found partial employment in CWA, PWA and other government jobs, and who will soon lose this work when CWA projects are halted this Spring. We have frequently pointed out that unless industry was put in a position to absorb these workers when their jobs ran out, the federal sums spent to maintain them would have been lost.

The important thing now is to divert government loans into industry promptly, so that real recovery can be speeded as much as possible and no time lost in putting people to work. The President sees the problem exactly as we see it, and it has been quite apparent for some time that Mr. Roosevelt usually sees things in the light that is best for the American people.

As the President pointed out, industrial working capital has been lost or seriously depleted in numberless cases.

"This condition," he says, "should be remedied." Obviously so, for the government has assisted railroads, banks, agriculture, insurance companies, etc., on the road to recovery at the same time it overlooked job-giving industry. Aiding those agencies was, of course, essential to the general recovery program, but no less essential was the same kind of federal loan assistance to industry.

Millions will reap the benefit of the President's proposal. When put into effect, it will mark another definite step toward a return to prosperity.

A fashion Show Arranged For You

WE MUST be in fashion today.

Fashion reaches even into our thoughts and speech, into our every activity, into almost every incidental of our present-day background. Though elusive and constantly changing, we must be familiar with this force — if we are to hold our places as active members of a modern community.

To speak of young girls as flappers is to date ourselves as immediately post-war. Plush and mohairs would stamp the past on our home furnishings. And antiquated household appliances would continue to submerge us in drudgery distinctly unfashionable.

There is no better parade of fashion than that which is presented to you daily in the pages of this newspaper. Through the advertisements, leading merchants and manufacturers are telling you about fashions in living.

Hats and shoes now being worn, the better kind of household conveniences, the best values in foods, decorations, furnishings — each advertisement contains sincere and truthful news of the latest offerings of the stores. With the advertisements you can keep abreast of the times. You will find that it pays you to read them every day.

DESCRIBES GOWNS SEEN DURING THE MID-LENTEN SEASON

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—The mid-Lenten season was celebrated by a number of smart gatherings, among them a big dinner at the Hotel Ritz, at which many of the new gowns stood out by the novelty of their conception. The beautiful, dark-haired Princess Alexandra of Greece wore one of these creations of Chanel, an evening gown in white pique with tiny strasse points scattered all over. Strasse buttons finished the front of the bodice and the belt had a strasse buckle in front. The shoulder straps were knotted in the back, at the waistline, leaving the back bare. A short train gives an added dignity of line.

I noticed, among others, the Princess Thurn and Taxis, who is an American, as well as the Ritz family, founders of the hotel system; Madame Cesar Ritz and her son, Charles Ritz, whose wife, Elizabeth Pearce, is an American girl.

ANKLE-LENGTH GOWN OF BLACK SATIN IS USED AT TEA TIME

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—The Ritz for tea still manages to attract a few people in spite of the growing popularity of the Crillon bar. I saw Mrs. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Minister, who was once so popular in Washington, walking down the rue de la Paix towards the Ritz at the tea hour. She had an ankle length black satin gown with a fur coat over it, and I thought looking more beautiful than ever with her lovely complexion and almond-shaped eyes.

Another visiting celebrity was Mile. Leonard, the niece of Puccini, the famous operatic composer of Madame Butterfly and other chef d'oeuvres. She wore one of the new Schiaparelli waistsuits made of silver fox, with two fox heads in black enamel that tuck into the belt in front. This garment is both dressy and warm, and has the added advantage of being suitable for both day and evening wear.

MORE WOMEN DRINK

BOSTON—(INS)—Statistics of the Boston police show an increase of arrest for intoxication among women. For the December 6-March 21 period 55 per cent. more women were arrested on that charge than during the same period a year ago. The figures were 523 against 336. Each month showed an increase over the corresponding month a year ago.

SOUGHT LIQUOR JOBS

DES MOINES, Ia.—(INS)—Nearly two per cent. of all of Iowa's male residents sought jobs in the new state liquor stores authorized by the last legislature. The liquor commission appointed to open and operate the stores was literally swarmed with more than 15,000 applications from persons wanting jobs in the store.

DIAMOND DUST

By Juno

Baseball will soon be in full glow. Every afternoon, players can be seen shagging flies and batting them out on various fields of the borough. If the diamond is not a regular ball field, the boys are there practicing.

Bristol High School will open its season at Fallsington on Tuesday. The game is listed as a Lower Bucks County League contest and is a chance for the Cardinal and Gray to get off to a right start.

There will be plenty of league teams and independent clubs in Bristol and vicinity. The Lower Bucks County circuit has its quota of six teams, while the Bristol Twilight League has entirely too many applications for its circuit. These circuits do not begin to operate until the first week in May.

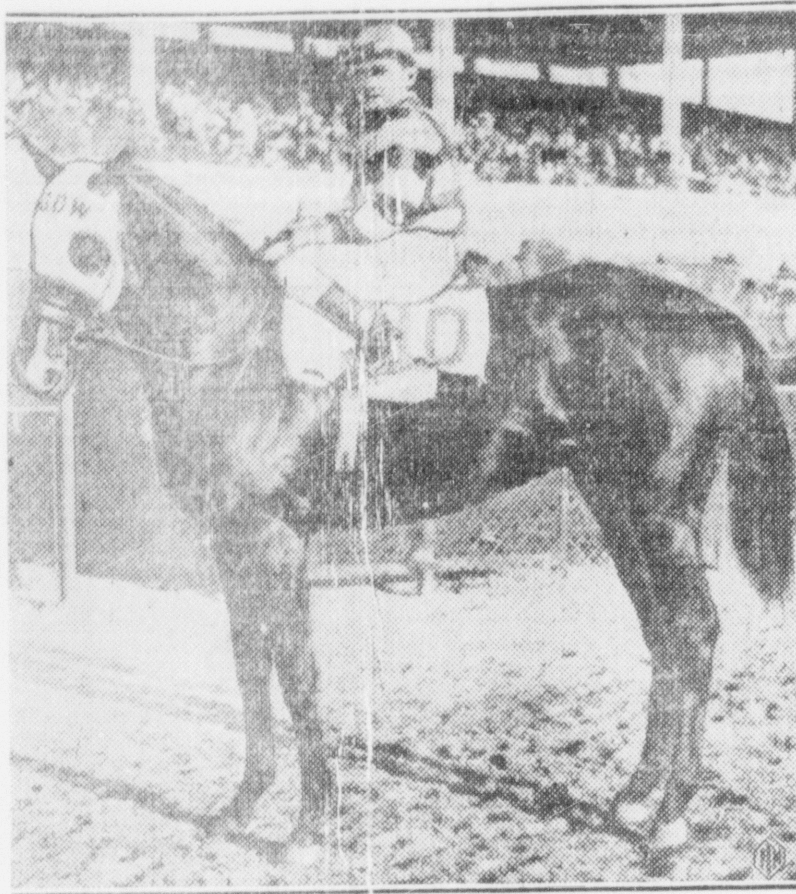

Whoever had the idea to begin that Boys' League had the right spirit as there is nothing like starting them in the game while young. Also by attracting the boys to a ball field is keeping them from the streets away from accidents.

Several Bristol boys are receiving try-outs in faster company with Philadelphia teams. "Jimmy" Massilla, Wilson Holland, and "Glee" Dougherty are going with Wentz-Olney. "Bill" Grindle, of Edgely, is with the Kensington A. C.

"Bill" Fine will keep in shape here until the Canadian League opens and then he will pack up and leave for Ogdensburg where he twirled last season.

Fancied for Kentucky Derby

"Chickstraw," three-year-old thoroughbred which runs under the colors of George D. Widener, is well liked by many racing experts as a possible candidate for premier honors in this year's Kentucky Derby, to be run at Louisville, Ky., on May 5.

The New Midnight Express

By BURNLEY

THE FLYER FROM OHIO

OWENS HAS EQUALLED OR BROKEN MOST OF THE SPRINT RECORDS

HE RECENTLY SET A NEW INDOOR BROAD JUMP MARK

Jesse OWENS

THIS OHIO STATE FRESHMAN SHOULD BE ONE OF THE BIG STARS OF THE 1936 OLYMPICS!

For some reason or other, the cinder paths burned up the tracks with several record performances, equalling the established century mark of 9.4 seconds, and speeding over the 220 course in the marvelous time of 20.7 seconds.

During the past indoor track season this erstwhile schoolboy marvel, now a freshman at Ohio State University, continued his string of sensational feats by equalling a world's record of eleven years' standing—the 60-yard indoor dash standard of 6.2 seconds.

But this latest sprint marvel is not content to rest on his laurels in the speed tests. Far from it! Owen is also a great broad-jumper; probably the best in the country, if not in the whole world.

"Jumping Jesse" as you might call him, zoomed forth into space with a prodigious leap during the recent indoor nationals, and when they measured the distance from his taking off place to the spot where he eventually landed, it turned out that he had eclipsed Hubbard's eight-year-old indoor record of 24 feet 7½ inches. He outdistanced the Hubbard mark 3 times in a row, and on his fourth try catapulted himself past the 25-foot mark—the first jumper to reach this distance in several years.

I predict here and now that this boy Jesse Owen is going to kick up a lot of fuss during the next Olympics. Wait and see!

ceiving try-outs for various clubs it is surprising to see the name of "Joie" Roe omitted. Bristol fans who saw this youngster perform for the Hibs last season are wondering why someone did not recommend "Joie" to some faster-company manager. "Joie's" catch of his brother Eddie's sizzling liner in that Lower Bucks-Twilight game at the close of last season will rest in the memories of Bristol fans for quite some time.

Leedom's field is again being put in shape for baseball. John Fields who did much to put St. Ann's into a first-class playing field, has been appointed official groundskeeper for the grounds and will begin work next week.

There will be plenty of independent Sunday ball in the locality. "Johnny" Mulholland will have his Bristol A. A. team against real opposition on the week-ends and promises to give the local fandom the kind of opposition that has been missing for several seasons.

"Dave" Landreth, at a Lower Bucks County League meeting, related the following tale: It seems that Connie Mack, always wishing to keep his players wide-awake in a game and keep them concentrating fast, suddenly called upon one of his rookie pitchers and asked, "If three runners were on base and 'Babe' Ruth stepped to the plate, what would you do?" The rookie's sharp retort was, "I'd faint."

YARDLEY

Patricia Ann is the name which has been selected by Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Davis for their daughter, who was born this week.

Tobacco Fortune Reynolds' Birthday Gift

Richard J. Reynolds, Jr., scion of the Winston-Salem, N. C., tobacco family, who received an inheritance of $25,000,000 on his 28th birthday recently, is no stranger to the newspaper headlines both in Europe and America. For many years he was a familiar figure in the gay spots of both continents. However, since his marriage in January, 1933, to his childhood sweetheart, Elizabeth Dillard, the erstwhile playboy has become a sedate country gentleman. His favorite sport now is driving his own trotting racers, of which he has a big stable. Dick is a brother of the late Smith Reynolds, in connection with whose mysterious death, his widow, Libby Holman, torch-singer, was indicted. The indictment was squashed later.

In Spring a
Young Man's Fancy

IN SPRING the whole world feels young once more.

It is the time of new birth . . . of rebirth . . . of a revival of old longings and the stirring of new desires.

The spirit of man and woman is always young in Spring. You long for new scenes . . . for new clothes . . . for new surroundings. A tradition, old as civilization, warns us that if we don't share in this newness, we will suffer through the year from a feeling of defeat, of bitterness, of frustration, of old age creeping upon us prematurely.

Now is the time to buy something new for the house . . . for yourself . . . for those around you. Now is the time to plan ahead for a vacation . . . for a trip, no matter how short a distance it may be away from home . . . for a car, a boat, or perhaps new fishing tackle.

It is a stirring time, this Spring; and the advertisements are full of interesting news of things you need. You will find it pays to read them carefully — to be sure of satisfaction — to make your dollars go farther.
